SolarWinds Breach and its Impact on Brightworth

Justin Husson ^[1] | Director of Information Technology

Brightworth has been monitoring the developments in the recent cyberattack linked to the SolarWinds Orion platform. We are dedicated to maintaining the security of your data and of our systems and want to share the status of our investigation into this widespread attack.

We do not use any SolarWinds product on our internal networks. We have reached out to all our third-party vendors and custodians that maintain privileged data, and, based on information available to date, we are not aware of any impact to our systems or services as a result.

Our information security team will continue to monitor the developments and update our environment to protect against this threat, as necessary. We will also inform our clients should there be any relevant updates.
